FORMER New York mayor, mob prosecutor and Donald Trump ally Rudy Giuliani has lost his license to practice law, had his bankruptcy case thrown out, and is facing possible jail time — but his lawyer said he's still enjoying being a celebrity in the city.

"I have to say, I don't know how he does it, but he keeps his chin up," said Arthur Aidala, the power attorney who is representing the fallen "America's Mayor" in three different legal cases.

"He obviously recognizes what has taken place, but when I speak to him he's energetic," said Aidala, whose clients also include Harvey Weinstein and Ghislaine Maxwell.

"He still enjoys a lot of positive celebrity," he told Page Six. "We can't go a block [in NYC] without someone saying, 'Rudy! I wish you were the mayor again! I wish you were running the city!' Especially on the Upper East Side," he added.

"We went to dinner at Arturo's [on York Avenue], and once that first table came over... 'Can we take a picture with you?' There was a line." Aidala went on, "People still did not forget [his time as mayor], people appreciate him more than ever," adding that the recognition "keeps his spirits high."

Aidala said that Rudy, 80, is close with his son, Andrew. "He's got a life, but it's definitely not the life it could've been and should've been," he said of Rudy.

After Giuliani was recently disbarred in NYC and recommended for disbarment in Washington, DC, "He lost ability to make a living," Aidala said. "It's such a fall from grace for someone who did so much for this city. He took the mob down."

The host of the hit "The Arthur Aidala Power Hour" on AM 970 said that he's repping Giuliani pro bono, as "It's no secret Mayor Giuliani has no funds... he's doing the best he can because he's in a bad predicament."

Giuliani was canned from his job as a radio show host on WABC in May.

The cake's all hers

IT'S J-Lone. Jennifer Lopez threw herself an early "Bridgerton"-themed 55th birthday party in the Hamptons over the weekend. And, according to People, her husband, Ben Affleck, was nowhere to be seen. The pair have been rumored to be on the outs for months. They famously married in 2022, reuniting after an 18-year separation. The pair also spent their wedding anniversary on opposite coasts last week. Page Six reported Lopez had dinner with one of her kids out East instead.

Model's new 'Job'

KAIA Gerber's predicting long-lasting digestive issues from sitting through the new psychological thriller, "Job," on Broadway. Gerber (above) led a talk with playwright Max Wolf Friedlich after Wednesday's performance of the play, and joked, "I am going to have a perpetual stomach ache after all that suspense!" It was part of her online book club, Library Science, and the audience for the event boasted her boyfriend, Austin Butler, as well as Cynthia McFadden, Tory Burch, Joanna Coles and Maria Cuomo Cole — all members of the group known as "Bad Ass Women in Media." "Job" stars "Succession's" Peter Friedman and Sydney Lemmon.

Fresh off her "Bridgerton"-themed birthday party, Jennifer Lopez hits Arthur & Sons in Bridgehampton for some tasty treats from chef Joe Isidori (right).

Garden of eatin'

JUST call her Marcia Gay Harden! Oscar winner Marcia Gay Harden said that since her show "So Help Me Todd" got canceled, she's been working on her veggies. "I'm working on summer — I'm working on my garden," she told Page Six at a screening of "Widow Clicquot." "I have a beautiful house in the Catskills." The "Mystic River" star admitted that she worries about mortgage payments "like everyone, but hopefully you've saved up a little bit when you're doing a good show." But, she said, the upside is "zucchini, as big as your thigh. I make zucchini bread, I make zucchini relish, I make zucchini chips," she told us.

Book learning

FORGET 23andMe. Tony nominee Juliana Canfield discovered that she has a connection to the Bouvier family by reading a stray copy of a book. Turns out her grandfather, Michael Canfield, was married to Jackie O's sister, Lee, and he even served as an usher at Jackie's wedding to John Kennedy. "Isn't that interesting?" she told Page Six.com's Nicki Gostin at a Cinema Society screening of "Widow Clicquot" at the Crosby Street Hotel. The marriage was annulled in 1962 with Lee going on to marry Prince Stanislaw Radziwill. The "Succession" star (above) said she first learned of the connection when she was 17 and going on a European jaunt and saw a copy of "c," which documented Lee and Jackie's trip to Europe in 1951. "I found a copy of it and that's when the worms came out of the can!"

We hear

THAT Food Network's NYC Wine & Food Festival returns in October with a lineup including Martha Stewart, Daniel Boulud, Blake Lively, Marcus Samuelsson, Snoop Dogg and Dr Dre... THAT the Commodore II bar in the East Village is kicking off its Vinyl Sunday Series with Sperry... THAT three-time Olivier Award winner Maria Friedman will be returning to Café Carlyle in September... THAT Isaac Mizrahi will be bringing his show "A Brief History" to 54 Below in August.

Juicy night for stars in UK

DR. Dre, Snoop Dogg and Eminem joined forces again for the UK launch of Dre and Snoop's new Gin & Juice spirit. The trio performed a concert at Flipper's Roller Boogie Palace in London, and we're told Eminem appeared as a surprise. "He changed his trip to London from last week to this week, so that he could join them," an insider told Page Six. Shaquille O'Neal and Yungblud hosted the event, which brought out celebs such as Jeremy Renner, Rich Paul, Dominic West, Offset, and Idris and Sabrina Elba. Jimmy Iovine and wife Liberty Ross were also in the building. (Iovine is a partner in the rap mogul's new spirit brand.) The men's USA Olympic basketball team snuck in the backdoor, and LeBron [James] was rapping along to every lyric, a spy said. The party continued after the performance, but Eminem, who has been sober for 16 years, opted out. "He looked good and healthy. He left immediately after the performance and the guys stayed and partied," our spy told us.
